WARRIORS FACE CANADIAN ICE CHAMPIONS

Loyola Warriors and the University of Toronto Blues, defending Canadian ice champions, renew their rivalry Friday night at Loyola Arena. Game time is 8:00 p.m.

The two teams met at Varsity Arena in Toronto on November 13th and the results were inconclusive as Loyola goalie Rocky Martin stopped Tom Watt's shooters cold, leading his Montreal team to a 1-1 tie, handling all but one of 38 shots directed his way before well over 3,000 fans.

Last year the two teams split their three game series, Loyola winning 10-4, Toronto 7-4, and one game ending in a 3-3 stalemate.

Success seems to have followed Toronto mentor Tom Watt even since he took over the reins of the Blues in 1965. His team have won 122 times, lost 18, and tied 11, in the process picking up four National titles.

So far this year the Blues have won four games and tied one (Loyola 1-1). They beat York 5-4, Western 8-3, Laurentian 8-1, and Tuesday of this week blanked Guelph 4-0 behind the shutout goaltending of Grant Cole. Brian St. John scored all of Blues' goals.

Dave Draper's aggregation have played seven games to date, showing five victories and two ties for their efforts. Wednesday's game result against University of Quebec - Three Rivers was not known as this was written.

After beating Carleton 5-3 and University of Montreal 5-1, Loyola played Toronto to a tie, then defeated McMaster 5-3, Macdonald 15-6, Sherbrooke 8-0 and had to settle for a 2-2 tie with a spirited Bishop's outfit.
